unnecessary as far as the things in the park serving the function they're intended by nature to serve. Would you agree?

SENATOR SCHROCK: I would agree but I would add that people that visit these parks expect to find clean rest rooms and trash receptacles that are maintained. Depends on the nature of the park. I think some of the parks are very rustic and some are very modernized. We have 86 parks in the state, and I would say to you there is no two of them alike.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: What would you say was the first trade that human beings engaged in, if you have any idea? Let's say that the Garden of Eden is where everything started. What would be the first trade that a human being would engage in in that setting, do you think?

SENATOR SCHROCK: Well, there was an apple exchanged, and I would guess that would be trade, or could be traded....be traded or betrayed, I'm not sure which it would be.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: (Laugh) All right. Now Senator Wehrbein was walking past and he said farming. Would you think that farming may have preceded the apple trade?

SENATOR SCHROCK: That depends on which comes first, the chicken or the egg, I suppose.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: But we haven't got to chickens yet because they would be nature's doing. The trade that a human being would develop. Would you say...

SENATOR SCHROCK: I think agricultural trade would be one of the first things that would have taken place.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Well, I would disagree. Wouldn't the one who makes the implements that are used in agriculture be engaged in the first trade, possibly? Okay. Now I'm going to bring you back to this bill. Can people be made to look for certain things in a park because those who maintain the parks have handled the parks in a certain way?
